

Konstanz-Warwick Workshop on Social Norms

Social norms are unwritten, implicit rules that regulate individual behaviour and the interaction of people. Compared to explicit rules such as laws or contracts, our understanding of social norms is rather limited. Where do such norms come from? How do they differ within and across societies? When and how do they change? Can we even create or manipulate social norms artificially? And how precisely do norms shape behaviour? Answers to these questions are crucial for the understanding and regulation of any kind of social interaction. This workshop brings together researchers from the Universities of Warwick and Konstanz. Participants will discuss their work investigating the formation, stability, and behavioural consequences of social norms, and identify areas of mutual interest to jump-start future collaboration. Due to this focus, the format of the short talks will be focused on a discussion-based exploration of the projects rather than a traditional presentation format.
